

Biology- Semester 2-Final Review Guide 2023

Microorganisms

1. What characteristics would a lab scientist look at if they were trying to "identify" the type of bacterial infection you had?

They would examine the shape, chemical makeup, and method of movement.

2. Describe the different ways in which bacteria get their nutrients (metabolic pathways).

First type is heterotrophs, meaning they get their food from outside sources

Chemotrophs: get carbon and energy from plants and animals (ex. e.coli)

Phototrophs: get their energy from the sun and carbon from organic organisms (ex. Soil dwellers)

Second type is autotrophs, who make their own food and energy

Photoautotrophs: use light energy from the sun and convert CO<sub>2</sub> and H<sub>2</sub>O into carbon compounds

Chemoautotrophs: use chemicals to get nourishment for itself: nitrates, sulfur iron

3. Describe the different ways in which bacteria reproduce.

Binary fission: bacteria doubles in size, replicates its DNA, and divides in half= 2 identical daughter cells

Conjugation: bacteria exchange DNA by forming a hollow bridge between each other and passing genes from one to the other

Other formation: form endospores (thick internal walls) that inclose DNA. These spores "wait" until environmental conditions are favorable ex. Anthax

4. What are viruses and what characteristics make them different from bacteria?

Viruses are particles of nucleic acid, protein, and sometimes, lipids. They're not living and only reproduce by infecting living cells. They don't contain ribosomes so they can't make proteins, making them dependent on their host. Viruses are pathogens: disease-causing agents. They're smaller than the cells they enter and destroy them (parasitic).

5. How do we combat bacteria when they infect us? Explain.

We use antibiotics that target the bacteria by either killing it or preventing its growth. It's important to use the number of antibiotics prescribed because the bacteria can develop resistance which makes it harder to treat.

6. How do we fight viral infections? Explain.

We use antiviral drugs that target specific viruses and stop their growth

7. What preventative step can we take against viruses? Describe how this works.

We can either administer vaccines which allow our body to learn the virus and kill it without actually experiencing it or use basic hygiene.

8. What is a disease and how is it spread?

A disease is any deviation from the normal functioning and it can either be viral or bacterial. It spreads through personal contact, contaminated food, droplets, or bites.

Cell Division and Cancer

Chapter 10

1. List the phases of the cell cycle and briefly describe what happens during each phase.

Interphase: cell prepares

Prophase: nuclear membrane starts to break down, and chromosomes are visible and replicated

Metaphase: chromosomes align in the middle (equatorial plate), and centrioles have sent out spindle fibers that attach to centromeres
