Federal Housing Policy And Programs Past And Present:

Unfair Housing Mara S. Sidney, 2003 It is difficult to ignore the fact that even as the United States becomes much more racially and ethnically diverse our neighborhoods remain largely segregated The 1968 Fair Housing Act and 1977 Community Reinvestment Act promised to end discrimination yet for millions of Americans housing options remain far removed from the American Dream Why do most neighborhoods in American cities continue to be racially divided The problem suggests Mara Sidney lies with the policies themselves She contends that to understand why discrimination persists we need to understand the political challenges faced by advocacy groups who implement them In Unfair Housing she offers a new explanation for the persistent color lines in our cities by showing how weak national policy has silenced and splintered grassroots activists Sidney explains how political compromise among national lawmakers with divergent interests resulted in housing legislation that influenced how community activists defined discrimination what actions they took and which political relationships they cultivated As a result local governments became less likely to include housing discrimination on their agendas existing laws went unenforced and racial segregation continued A former undercover investigator for a fair housing advocacy group Sidney takes readers into the neighborhoods of Minneapolis and Denver to show how federal housing policy actually works She examines how these laws played out in these cities and reveals how they eroded activists capability to force more sweeping reform in housing policy Sidney also shows how activist groups can cultivate community resources to overcome these difficulties looking across levels of government to analyze how national policies interact with local politics In the first book to apply policy design theories of Anne Schneider and Helen Ingram to an empirical case Sidney illuminates overlooked impacts of fair housing and community reinvestment policies and extends their theories to the study of local politics and nonprofit organizations Sidney argues forcefully that understanding the link between national policy and local groups sheds light on our failure to reduce discrimination and segregation As battles over fair housing continue her book helps us understand the shape of the battlefield and the prospects for victory

Rebuilding Low Income Housing Rachel Bratt, 1994-07-28 Examining earlier federal housing initiatives Rachel Bratt argues that public housing has not failed She proposes a new strategy for producing decent affordable housing for low income people through non profit community based organizations The potential of a new housing policy built on empowering community groups and low income households is compelling The production rehabilitation management and or ownership by community based organizations with funding and technical assistance provided by a new type of public support system not only would offer participants much needed shelter but also control over and security in their living environments These qualities have been lacking in housing sponsored by the private for profit sector as well as in previous subsidy programs The author analyzes the limitations of both profit oriented developers and public agencies as the primary vehicles for developing low and middle income housing Promoting small scale neighborhood organizations as better suited for delivering such services she focuses on large multi family projects and argues that our urban public housing stock represents an irreplaceable resource that is rapidly decaying to a point of no return Through a number of case studies of housing projects throughout Massachusetts among them South Holyoke the Granite Properties Fields Corner in Dorchester and the Boston Housing Partnership Bratt examines the dilemmas faced by community development corporations analyzes the accomplishments of empowered community groups and recommends ways ofRebuilding a Low Income Housing Policy Author note Rachel G Brattis Associate Professor Department of Urban and Environmental Policy at Tufts University The Federal Government and Urban Housing, Third Edition R.
