

Methods of Phylogeny:

1. Phylogenetic tree with bootstrap percentages
2. Phylogenetic tree with posterior probabilities
3. Phylogenetic tree with support values

Assessing phylogenetic support: how good the nodes of the tree are!

1. Bootstrap is just re-sampling species or sites (randomized order) to get another bootstrap tree. Long branch has good support because they are conserved and stable (not being overruled by another species/sequence).

It usually a first bootstrap analysis was used to determine the 5-10% of the species to be sampled.

2. Posterior probability is used that is more stable as the bootstrap (high stability, high support) based on the model (based on Markov chain Monte Carlo).

Modeling an evolutionary tree (subjective analysis shows that tree structure within the same phylogenetic tree can vary already a lot).

3. Bayesian (more stable) bootstrap is more stable as the bootstrap (high stability, high support) based on the model (based on Markov chain Monte Carlo).
