Normal Human Variations Aspergers Personality:

American Masculinities in Contemporary Documentary Film Sara Martín,2023-05-24 Most documentaries deal with men but what do they actually say about masculinity In this groundbreaking volume Sara Martín analyses more than forty 21st century documentaries to explore how they represent American men and masculinity From Jennifer Siebel Newsom's The Mask You Live In to Raoul Peck's I Am Not Your Negro this volume explores sixteen different faces of American masculinity the good man the activist the politician the whistleblower the criminal the sexual abuser the wrongly accused the dependent man the soldier the capitalist the adventurer the sportsman the architect the photographer the musician and the writer The collective portrait drawn by the documentaries discloses a firm critical stance against the contradictions inherent in patriarchy which makes American men promises of empowerment it cannot fulfill The filmmakers view of American masculinity emphasizes the vulnerability of disempowered men before the abuses of the patriarchal system run by hegemonic men and a loss of bearings about how to be a man after the impact of feminism accompanied nonetheless by a celebration of resilient masculinity and of the good American man Firmly positioning documentaries as an immensely flexible relevant tool to understand 21st century American men and masculinity their past present and future this book will interest students and scholars of film studies documentary film American cultural studies gender and masculinity

Autism and Creativity Michael Fitzgerald,2004-08-02 Autism and Creativity is a stimulating study of male creativity and autism arguing that a major genetic endowment is a prerequisite of genius and that cultural and environmental factors are less significant than has often been claimed Chapters on the diagnosis and psychology of autism set the scene for a detailed examination of a number of important historical figures For example in the Indian mathematician Ramanujan the classic traits of Asperger's syndrome are shown to have coexisted with an extraordinary level of creativity more unexpectedly from the fields of philosophy politics and literature scrutiny of Ludwig Wittgenstein Sir Keith Joseph Eamon de Valera Lewis Carroll and William Butler Yeats reveals classical autistic features Autism and Creativity will prove fascinating reading not only for professionals and students in the field of autism and Asperger's syndrome but for anyone wanting to know how individuals presenting autistic features have on many occasions changed the way we understand society

Simulating Minds Alvin I. Goldman,2006-07-06 People are minded creatures we have thoughts feelings and emotions More intriguingly we grasp our own mental states and conduct the business of ascribing them to ourselves and others without instruction in formal psychology How do we do this And what are the dimensions of our grasp of the mental realm In this book Alvin I Goldman explores these questions with the tools of philosophy developmental psychology social psychology and cognitive neuroscience He refines an approach called simulation theory which starts from the familiar idea that we understand others by putting ourselves in their mental shoes Can this intuitive idea be rendered precise in a philosophically respectable manner without allowing simulation to collapse into theorizing Given a suitable definition do empirical results support the notion that minds literally create or attempt to create

How People Think about Science Information Sara Brook Ball,2007 Science and society have never quite lived in perfect harmony This has been due to a variety of factors hindering the relationship between these two Nevertheless science increasingly affects our daily lives Regardless of assumptions as to what people should know about science and why they should know it academic research needs to have a more complete understanding of how people think about science information The current study examines and attempts to avoid common assumptions previously made in analyzing this question This study uses a categorization task to reveal how individuals think about science content and correlates individual understandings of the content to individual differences The findings presented here comprise an initial attempt to define publics for science information according to the ways they inherently and individually make sense of such information representing a new approach to defining publics for science information This approach is intended to add an individual component to be taken in combination with previous investigations into the question of how people think about science information which generally hold that differences are attributable to social cultural and geographical factors Future research under this paradigm may add greatly to our integrated understanding of how people think about science information and may have great and far reaching practical implications Abstract
