

Unit 1 Reading Section 1 Pure Competition

Characteristics of Pure Competition:

The simplest market structure is pure competition. In such markets, many firms produce the same product and sell the same price. Producers take their products to sell part of the total supply, so that each individual producer is unable to have any influence on what price other consumers must pay. There is great freedom to enter and leave the industry. Firms enter and leave the industry freely. Producers are the same size, and the market structure is called atomistic. Each buyer purchases what he will believe about the product. Each seller receives what he can and leaves the market easily. There is free entry and exit of firms and free movement of factors of production. Economists usually describe the market for agricultural and the market for foreign exchange as pure competition.

Market Structure

1. Perfect competition: means that there are large number of small independent producers who are selling the same product.
2. In perfect competition, each producer is a price taker. The market has many sellers and buyers. The competition is free, free entry and exit, free selling and purchase, and free movement of factors of production. This enables consumers to obtain maximum satisfaction. In perfect competition, each producer produces the product according to the market price and receives the market price for the product. In perfect competition, each producer produces the necessary product to sell at the market price.
3. Perfect competition: each good has its own market. Producers are price takers and sell the same good.
4. Other two market structures: are the oligopoly market, monopoly market, and imperfect competition. In oligopoly market, a few large producers produce the same product. In monopoly market, one producer produces the same product. In imperfect competition, many small producers produce the same product.
5. Other two market structures: are the oligopoly market, monopoly market, and imperfect competition. In oligopoly market, a few large producers produce the same product. In monopoly market, one producer produces the same product. In imperfect competition, many small producers produce the same product.
