

8. To get a better view of the pulmonary valve, make an incision across the pulmonary trunk to view the valve from above. Observe the semilunar cusps of the valve.

9. Next, you will dissect the left atrium. Identify the chamber by the four pulmonary veins entering this chamber, two from the left and two from the right. Make your first incision from left to right, from one set of veins to the other. If it is necessary to open the atrium up further, make the second incision shown in the diagram to the right.

10. Inside of the left atrium, look for the valve that controls the flow of blood between the left atrium and the left ventricle. This is called the mitral or bicuspid valve. This valve consists of two cusps. You will see them better when you cut into the left ventricle.

11. Next, you will open up the left ventricle, the final chamber of the heart that blood enters before exiting the heart. To do this you will make a flap in the front of the left ventricle, in a manner similar to the incisions you made to expose the right ventricle. Use the picture to the right to guide you in making these incisions.

12. Note the thickness of the walls of the left ventricle. Why do you think that it has the thickest walls? Observe that the structure of the left ventricle is roughly similar to the right ventricle. You should be able to find trabecular carneae, papillary muscles, and chordae tendinae. The chordae tendinae attach to the two flaps of the bicuspid valve. Next, you will look for the aortic valve, which is just to the right of the bicuspid valve. The aortic valve controls the left ventricle to the aorta. Pass a probe through this valve to find the proximal aorta on the superior aspect of the heart.

13. Look at the superior view of the heart and identify the aorta by seeing where you probe is exiting the aortic valve. Make an incision from superior to inferior, raising open the most proximal aspect of the aorta. Once you have done this you will be able to better observe the three semilunar cusps of the aortic valve. Try to find the openings to the left and right coronary arteries. They should be located within one of the three cusps of the aortic valve.
