Save Our Environment

A marvellous variety of wildlife flourishes on Southeast Asia. On land is everything from snakes and lizards to tigers and rhinoceroses. The sea also has many fascinating creatures, and including dolphins, sea-snakes and tropical fish.

However, many forms of wildlife is threatened by human beings. Large areas from trees are being cut down for timber and to create land for farming. This makes it difficult for many plants and animals to survive. For an example, the destruction of the rainforests Borneo and Sumatra has greatly reducing the numbers of orangutangs live in these areas.

At sea the most greatest problem is over-fishing by modern trawlers. Some types of fish may disappears because this.

It is clear that more action must taken to protect this region before even more destructions occurs.
