Triticale ,1989 History Triticale today Limitations and uncertainties Breeding triticale Food and feed uses Experiences around de world Research needs Wheat Landraces Nusret Zencirci,Faheem S. Baloch,Ephrem Habyarimana,Gyuhwa Chung,2021-09-15 Landraces possess a very large genetic base in population structure and are dynamic populations of cultivated plants with historical origin distinct identity and without any formal crop improvement They are often genetically diverse locally adapted and associated with traditional farming systems Resistance genes to biotic and abiotic stress factors which are especially diversified in landraces are of great interest to plant breeders faced with global climate challenge In addition gene pools made of different landraces grown in different ecological conditions can be used for wheat breeding to enhance quality yield and other desirable agricultural parameters An estimated 75% of the genetic diversity of crop plants was lost in the last century due to the replacement of high yielding modern varieties There is thus an urgent need to preserve existing species not only for posterity but also as a means to secure food supply for a rising world population In this book we provide an overview of wheat landraces with special attention to genetic diversities conservation and utilization Genetics P.
